U.S. Commitment to Global Child Survival Act of 2007 (H.R. 2266)

To restore United States leadership in improving the health of mothers, newborns and children, H.R. 2266 would:

- Significantly increase investments in proven, cost-effect international child and maternal health programs, including the Global Vaccines Initiative and UNICEF.
- Require the United States Government to develop an integrated strategy for supporting the improvement of child and maternal health, which will:
 - Identify and target the countries in greatest need;
 - Expand USAID's Child Survival and Health Grants Program;
 - Enhance coordination among relevant government departments and agencies.
- Create a U.S. Government inter-agency Child and Maternal Health Task Force to coordinate activities directed toward achieving maternal and child health goals.
- Set out guidelines for child survival programs, including building local capacity and self-sufficiency, partnerships with non-governmental organizations, participation by local communities, and coordination with other donors.
- Require the President to submit an annual report to Congress detailing U.S. efforts to promote child and maternal health and survival globally.
- Authorize increased funding to expand child and maternal health interventions, including $600 million in FY 2008, $900 million for FY 2009, $1.2 billion for FY 2010, and $1.6 billion for FY 2011 and 2012.
